WORLD AIDS
DAY 2025

Editors Words

As the nights draw in and our homes begin to twinkle with fairy lights and Christmas with it's familar kind of magic is in the air take a moment to think of all of the families out there around the world who have lost a loved one to Aids.

I alway know Christmas has truly arrived when I'm pinning on my red Aids ribbon on to my jacket for all to see,.

Please don't forget that World Aids Day is only a day in the year out of 365 and for the other 364 finding a cure is still the top priority of scientists around the world so do if you can show your support throughout the year and not just on the 1st December.

Welcome to My Bonsai Friends UK.

I created this website and Facebook group to help me find helpful YouTube tutorial videos on my artistic journey with bonsai, and I want to share it all for free.

The website will guide you to YouTube channels that teach you how to care for bonsai trees, including pruning and wiring.

Bonsai is not just about the trees; it's also a community and very meditative.

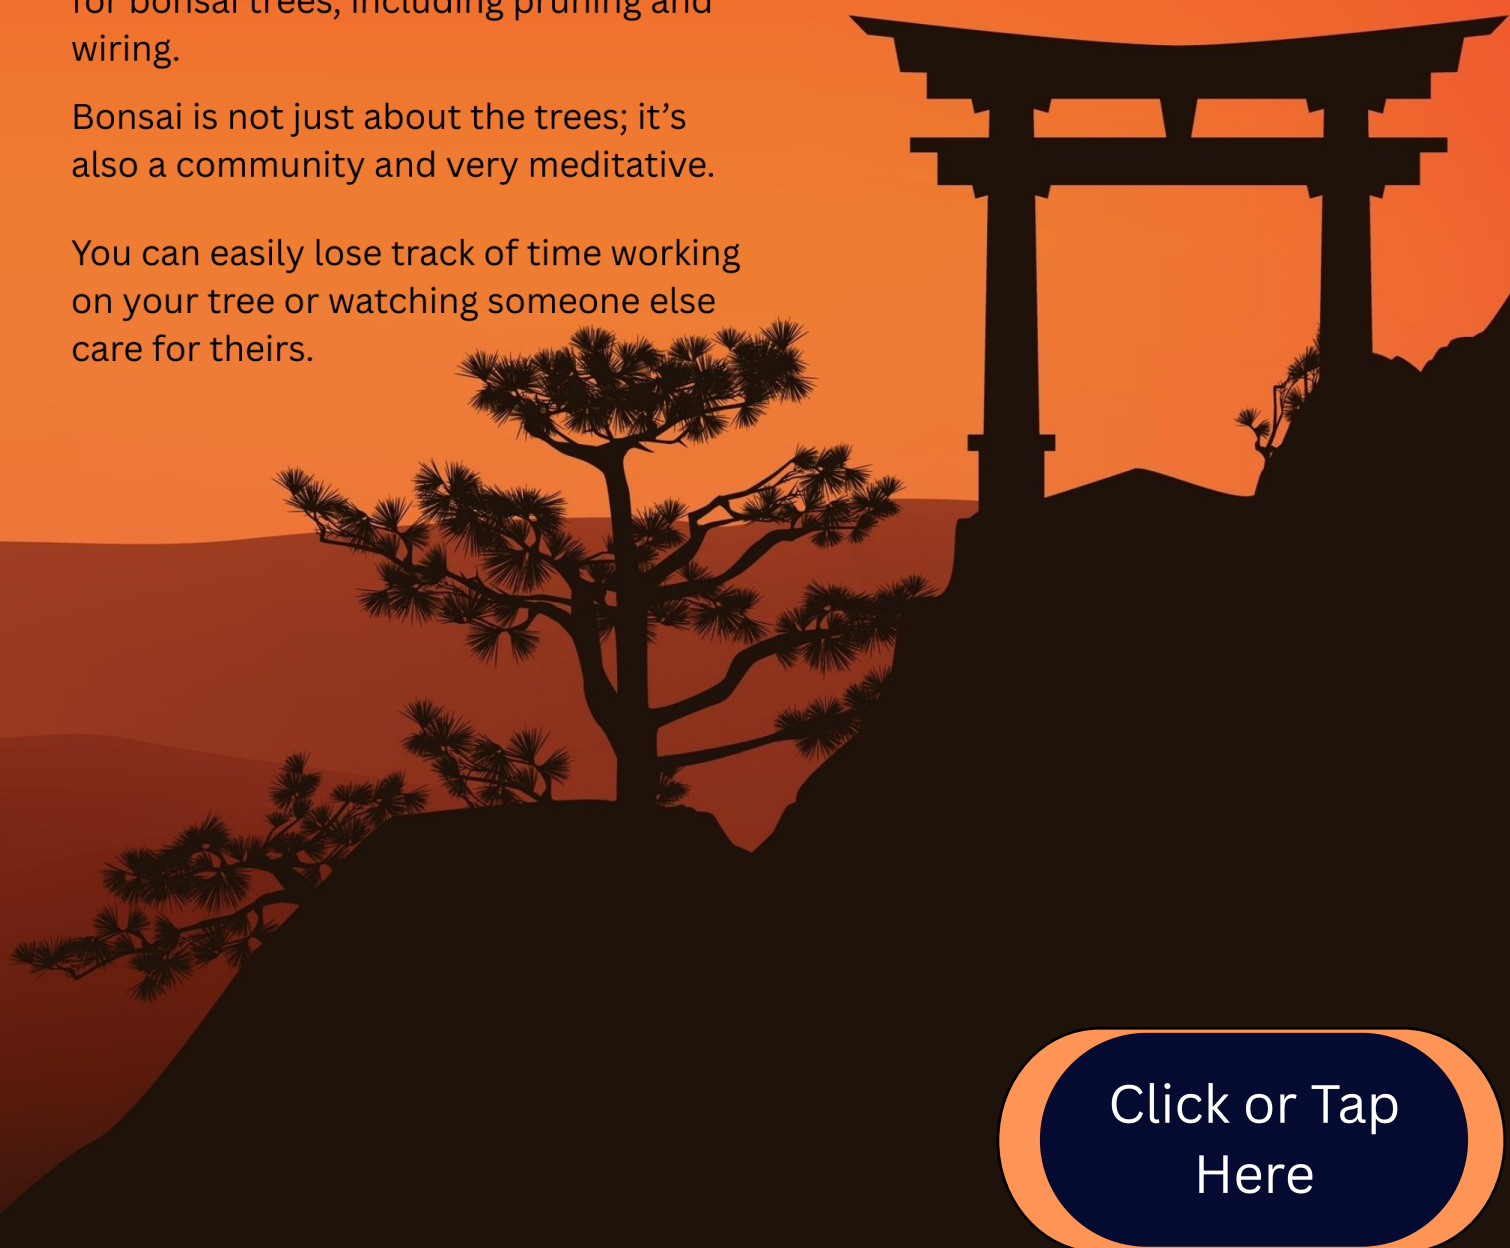

You can easily lose track of time working on your tree or watching someone else care for theirs.

You can read my reviews on the website and in the Facebook group; these are free reviews based on my experiences with online shops' services and products, as well as requested reviews for items sent to me, like plants and pots.

Over time, the Facebook group will grow into a community of bonsai artists where people can share tips and showcase their trees.

The group and website will also inform you about upcoming bonsai events in the UK, Northern Ireland, and Ireland.

PRODUCT REVIEW

Notion Bonsai

Personal review

www.notionbonsai.com

Welcome to this insightful review of Notion Bonsai's shop and service.

I confidently placed my order on the 7th of November for four exceptional items from Notion Bonsai's online store: the Bonsai Care Bundle Cut Putty (Grey & Brown) for £38.99 and a Rooting Hormone Gel for cuttings with 0.25% IBA for £12.00. I have to say that I thought it was great value for money.

The website is incredibly user-friendly, featuring a vast array of items, many handmade and packaged with clear, easy-to-understand descriptions—ideal for someone like me who is new to bonsai.

Shopping online here felt just as straightforward as following Adam's YouTube Channel—very intuitive.

When I encountered an issue with Royal Mail Tracked 48, I promptly contacted Adam for assistance.

He responded swiftly, resolving everything within 24 hours, and by the 14th of November, all my items were delivered right to my door.

I was genuinely impressed with how my items were packaged, avoiding wasteful and bulky packaging that some online shops use.

The four items were securely delivered in a strong bubble wrap envelope. Without a doubt, I'll be placing more orders from Adam's online shop, and I highly recommend it to anyone embarking on their bonsai journey—especially novices who need a bit of extra support in selecting the right items and learning how to use them.

I discovered Adam's website through his engaging Notion Bonsai YouTube channel; his easy-to-follow videos gave me the confidence that he truly knows what his viewers need for specific tasks. If you're new to bonsai and seeking clear, effective tutorials, Notion Bonsai is the perfect starting point.

You can find links to his shop and YouTube channel on our website. It's five stars from My Bonsai Friends UK!

Yuletide Fire

Bells ring soft through chilled air, but older songs still linger there...
evergreen garland strung against the wall, a slant of light breaking through the dim room.

While we deck the halls with things
of evergreen,
like life defiant, sharp and sweet.
The holly berries reminding us of eternal flames,
a promise etched in winter's last exhale.

Candles flicker on midnight's crest,
we gift each other love and laughter,
for joy is born from fire's light.

So sing the tides, raise your glasses,
gather close in our circle's cheer.
For the Solstice Sun
rises...

then spills gold to drive away
all shadows near.

Back From Hibernation

Portsmouth Musician Richard 'Ricky' Palmer Closes Defining Year with Triumphant Single, 'Back from Hibernation,' Championing Mental Health Awareness.

Singer, songwriter, and performer Richard 'Ricky' Palmer is set to release his final single of 2025, the deeply personal and powerful original track, 'Back from Hibernation.' The track serves as the title track for his forthcoming album and caps a transformative year that saw the musician return from personal despair to dedicating his career to mental health advocacy and suicide prevention.

Richard's journey, which began on January 7th, 2025, when a simple conversation led him back to his guitar, is a testament to the life-saving power of connection and music. As a suicide survivor, his mission is now clear: to use his eclectic fusion of pop, rock, country, and musical theatre styles to inspire others and raise awareness for vital causes.

A Year of Purposeful Releases

The release of 'Back from Hibernation' is the culmination of a highly productive year marked by both heartfelt covers and original songs:

'You've got a friend' (October 2025): Released on World Mental Health Day, this reinterpreted Carole King classic was a collaborative effort with The Shine4U Project and aimed to directly support the charitable organisation, Let's get talking about suicide. The track emphasizes the importance of reaching out and checking in on loved ones.

'Buddy' (September 2025): A moving tribute honouring his musical hero, Buddy Holly, released on what would have been the legend's 89th birthday. Richard plans to continue this tribute in 2026 with his original song, Cindy-Lou, followed by his debut EP, A Tribute to Buddy.

'Waiting on a Miracle'(August 2025): A distinctive cover from Disney's Encanto, showcasing Richard's powerful vocal range and ability to reimagine beloved pieces.

'Raise your trans flag high' (June 2025): Demonstrating his commitment to diverse communities and social causes.

'True love ways' (February 2025): A poignant cover released to coincide with the anniversary of Buddy Holly's passing.

About Richard 'Ricky' Palmer

Hailing from Portsmouth, UK, Richard 'Ricky' Palmer is celebrated for his wide-ranging musical palette, influenced by icons such as Buddy Holly, John Lennon, Paul Simon, and Freddie Mercury. His work is characterised by his profound appreciation for collaboration and his unwavering dedication to musical exploration, whether as a singer, songwriter, performer, or events planner. His music resonates with both timeless and contemporary sensibilities, pushing artistic boundaries while remaining heartfelt and innovative.

Shine4U Records - Shining a light

Founded by Richard 'Ricky' Palmer, Shine4U Records distinguishes itself in the music industry through its profound motto: "Shining a light by giving more than we receive." This is not merely a slogan, but the company's guiding principle.

This philosophy is put into action through an unwavering dedication to philanthropy. Furthermore, Shine4U champions artists who use their platform for social good, such as their flagship musician known for songs advocating for mental health awareness.

By amplifying these critical discussions and embracing generosity, Shine4U Records shapes a more vibrant and music landscape, ensuring music serves as a catalyst for positive change.

'Back from Hibernation' is not just a song; it is a declaration of renewed purpose and a hopeful anthem for anyone finding their way back from the darkness.

Just when we were all enjoying the mild November days we get an early winter greeting with frost, bitterly cold winds and snow! That was a shock to the system and has brought most of the leaves down from the trees. Minds are settling on the garden centre now for the Christmas trees and decorations. Most of the plants have shut down for the winter although there are a few that are winter flowering such as Viburnum tinus and Viburnum bodnantense 'Dawn' both beautiful in a dull part of the garden to light up that area and 'Dawn' has a nice delicate scent as well as the pink flowers.

A lot of people's grass needs a cut – not a low cut, just to take the top off, mine included but don't do it if a frost is expected as the grass will turn black. You should be able to cut back any remaining stems from bulbs such as the stargazers which have suddenly turned yellow in my garden. The Wisteria has lost the majority of its leaves and so is easy to tie back now you can see all the stems once again.

Keep debris such as fallen leaves out of the pond as much as possible as they will only sink and decompose at the bottom of the pond which will prevent you having nice clear water in the spring. You can leave the pump going for waterfalls if you want which will stop the surface freezing over but make sure your fish are hardy. I have goldfish and they are fine with the gentle waterfall going all year round.

Remember the birds and any other wildlife visitors you have. It's a great year for berries and nuts but they won't last forever so a supplement of fat balls or suet in coconut shells will make a difference to them.

I've got some winter veg in potato sacks in my cold greenhouse and all they will need is a check on watering levels to make sure they aren't dry from a sunny day and equally aren't rotting from too much moisture on the leaves.

Pruning can be done in December but again only if a frost isn't imminent as that will cause some die back to cut stems.

Fallen leaves are great for compost so if you have the space put as many as you can get into your compost heap and they will rot down and make great compost or mulch next year.

I'm sure lots of you will have either grown your own or purchased some indoor flowering bulbs. For best results keep them cool in a light place and keep them watered. Once the flowers have finished let the leaves develop and you can plant them in the garden although sometimes, they don't flower the following year. They last much longer than cut flowers and look more natural in an arrangement or fancy pot.

If you want a Christmas tree you can plant outside for another year, you will need one that has been container grown and plenty of roots.

Some in containers have just had their roots cut off and placed in a pot – they won't live if replanted, but they may keep their leaves a little longer which is why it's done.

After Christmas don't forget to recycle your tree at your local recycling centre. It's much better they be turned into mulch than going into landfill. Also don't feel guilty buying a live tree as these have been grown as a crop just like any other and haven't been stripped from the countryside as some people seem to think. They are usually grown on land not suitable for growing anything else or are protective trees in young forests for slower growing trees and so have to be removed anyway.

Some very healthy-looking Poinsettias showing some of the different colours you can buy these days. Keep them away from drafts and be careful with the watering.

- Plant of the Month -
Magnolia

I have mentioned two winter flowering shrubs already but really there can only be one plant of the month for December and that is the Poinsettia. They now come in several colours as opposed to just the red which everyone must have seen many times over the years. They aren't the easiest plant to keep indoors as they hate sudden changes in temperature but need to be kept cool – not cold. Careful watering is also needed so as not to overdo it. Stand the pot on a saucer of water and after half an hour remove any still in the saucer.

What most people think of as the flowers on Poinsettias are actually leaves or bracts to be precise. You can just about make out on these photos in the centre of the scarlet red leaves are some points of yellow – they are the flowers.

Enjoy the break if you get one as well as thumbing through those seed catalogues! Stay safe and warm we don't want any frozen assets.

Merry Christmas and a very Happy New Year!

50 and Fabulous

Hi, I'm Debbie and I run Wacadoddles. This is about my fabulous year and turning the big 50. To me, age is just a number and if you act your age, I would be about 12 because I am the biggest kid ever. It's been such a good year for me, Wacadoddles and my family.

I got treated to a family holiday in Tenerife for my birthday, so I put my big girl pants on because I have never been on holiday abroad before. It just goes to show you how being brave can turn out so amazing because I had the best time.

I got over my sea sickness and got on a catamaran to see the whales and dolphins. I even went parasailing and oh yes, I was singing Defying Gravity on my way up. We went up a volcano, and we did a bit of snorkelling. I won't bore you with holiday pics, well maybe one of me parasailing. Wacadoddles has had a brilliant year too.

Highlights include Dover Pride which is still totally awesome, the hops festivals, the carnivals and my regular slot at Ashford Creative market with Katy Morrison. A big shout out to my son, Matthew, who is my partner in crime on the stall, and I couldn't run it without him. I would also like to shout out my hubby who in his words sweeps the floors and makes the tea.

All you customers are so kind and friendly and make my job, so much easier. My job is making, designing and creating weird, wonderful and absolutely bonkers steampunk hand knitted characters including LGBTQIA + characters too. I'm selling on my stall or online. I also sell steampunk accessories. My website is www.wacadoddles.com

Now enough of the plugging of my business because I have to tell you the most exciting news. My beautiful transgender daughter has flown the nest. She has rented herself a beautiful one bedroom flat. It just goes to show what a difference a year makes when you are brave because my daughter a year ago hardly left her room apart from work. With therapy and a lot of love she has grown in confidence and I'm so immensely proud of her. Now she can make me a cuppa when I visit her.

She also was finally accepted to the NHS transgender clinic in London after 5 years on the waiting list. They were absolutely amazing with her. She is over the moon with their service and can't praise them enough.

As her mum it fills my heart with joy to see her so happy.

I suppose my 50th year is about taking that leap of faith. Going into the unknown and facing it head on and finding out actually this life can be so much fun and wonderful with my business, family and myself to take that leap despite my anxiety, fibromyalgia.

Milan, 1913. Maestro Mandelli di Castagnino is resident conductor at La Scala, having taken over from the legendary Toscanini.

Barely in his mid-thirties, he is revered by the Milanese public and fêted by the city's high society. But once the baton is down, and after another soirée in his honour organised by his sycophantic agent, he returns to an empty home, surrounded only by his servants.

Disenchanted and longing to leave his secret life behind, he accepts a post as resident chief conductor at the Odessa Opera House, causing consternation among his family and admirers.

After an eventful journey by land and sea, he settles in the elegant coastal city, improving the performance of the orchestra and winning the approval and friendship of the locals.

He also finds love, but the continent is about to sleepwalk into the carnage of a futile war and Imperial Russia is on the cusp of being rocked by the October Revolution.

Undeterred by the unfolding catastrophe and wanting to protect his beloved from the savagery of the civil war, he is confronted with a desperate choice.

Causeway works with Eastenders on latest cuckooing storyline

If you've been watching Eastenders lately you may have seen the storyline on cuckooing.

Earlier this year Causeway began work with the EastEnders research and scriptwriting team to advise on their current cuckooing storyline which features the grooming and exploitation of vulnerable character Kojo (played by actor Dayo Kolesho pictured above).

The research team met with members of Causeway's Communications Team, as well as people with lived-experience of cuckooing and criminal exploitation who had been supported by Causeway, to find out more about the realities of grooming and coercion, especially of vulnerable people.

Working with Eastenders was a great opportunity to explore and raise awareness of the sinister issue of home takeovers, discover more about script development, help advise the writers in creating a realistic portrayal of the grooming process of vulnerable people, and the emotional manipulation it takes to gain control over someone's life and home.

Cuckooing is now recognised as a standalone criminal offence in the UK and is a form of exploitation where criminals take over someone's home, sometimes violently, sometimes after grooming and manipulating them, and using it for illegal activities such as drug dealing or sexual exploitation.

Tales of the Second City

Misadventures on Birmingham's Gay Scene

Home is Where the Heart Is Ruru approached my partner and I with a proposal. How would we feel about him moving into our spare room?

He currently lived in his crowded family home. Three sisters were in one room, whilst little brother had been in with his parents since he was born. This brother was now on the cusp of teenage years and needed his own space. It was no longer appropriate for him to share with mom and pop. Ru had to surrender his room and move out.

Initially, we weren't sure. It had been just the two of us for a long time. It was one thing to have this Muppet as my daft little bestie on the Birmingham gay scene, but quite another having him move in as a permanent housemate. We were concerned his presence might disrupt the status quo but agreed to give it a go.

During his first week of residence, Ru barely emerged from his room. We had to tempt him down with offers of food and Disney films, watching Mufasa, Mulan, and both Moana movies (Anything starting with M). After so much saccharine, we graduated to horror. The Final Destination franchise has been an exhilarating roller coaster ride (not to mention... plane crash, bridge collapse, highway pile-up, racetrack disaster, and tower of terror). After watching the first film in the series, we stepped into the kitchen to regale my partner with highlights.

As we chatted, he dropped a utensil, which flipped a knife and sent it hurtling in our direction. We thought we were going to die!

Over the weeks, Ru became steadily more at home in our home, until one evening he came swishing into the kitchen wearing nothing but briefs and a little vest top. "What?" he asked innocently, clocking a silent exchange between my partner and myself, then declared, "I'm feeling more comfortable!"

Our dog loves Ru living with us. She adores him. He has been her favourite hooman since his brief stay, back when she was an impressionable puppy... when she spent two weeks chewing on Ru like a pig's ear. She now greets his return home, or descent down the stairs, with enthusiastic tail thumps and a treasured toy in her mouth, then proceeds to trot around at his heels. They are fiercely protective of each another. If I raise my voice in mock anger, she comes growling to his defence, and when someone in a bar dared criticise the pup, Ru was ready for a punch-up. I had to tell him, "Calm down Scrappy-Doo!" (Or should that be 'Scrappy-Ru?').

Despite him being thirty years of age, it feels like we have adopted a teenager. There is laundry to wash, trash to collect from his room, and basic house lessons to teach: use a tray; pick up after yourself; turn lights off; don't track muddy marks across the rug; try not to set the kitchen on fire! Seriously, he was attempting to cook a preprepared stir-fry in overheated oil, resulting in a column of fire flaring to the ceiling, which he aggravated by dousing with water.

It was like something from those old public information commercials warning about the hazards of a chip pan. We may need to keep a wet tea towel handy in case of future culinary chaos.

His food shopping is eclectic, usually conducted under the influence of several pints. He'll return home with whatever miscellaneous discount groceries caught his eye (lobster claws, smiley potato faces, a lucky-dip of tinned goods and ready-meals, half a dozen bagels, condiments galore, and a box of tampons) then try and turn them into a meal, like a contestant on Ready Steady Cook.

Having Ruru in our home has given me the perfect response to those far-right bigots who ape the question, "If yer love these immigrants comin' over 'ere so much, why don't you 'ave one livin' in yer 'ouse?"

I relish informing them I have a Yemeni living in my spare room.

And... he's still my daft little bestie.

Our Pygmalion is a work-in-progress, who's presence has introduced an unpredictable new dynamic to the household and disrupted our lifestyle... for the better.

We have become a happy family of three.
